CENTENARIANS

By ELLA MATTHEWS BANGS.

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Think of the discoveries within the last hundred years!"

Phillip Morton bent toward the girl as he spoke, but Irene Weston let the young man on her other side respond.

"Can't be as many in a hundred years to come."

"Why not?" Phillip resented. "Electricity is only in its infancy."

Irene smiled in the twilight. They were sure to take opposite sides for rivals in their devotion to herself, it could not be expected that they would agree on any other subject.

The two continued to argue while the girl in her fluttering white dress listened with an undercurrent of thought entirely apart from their topic. Which of these two did she love. Phillip Morton or Dick Farnam? How could she tell? If they would only be satisfied with friendship! But to each she promised a definite answer for tomorrow. At length she spoke.

"Wouldn't it be fine if we could live a hundred years and see for ourselves?"

"Great," Phillip agreed.

"Well, I don't know," Dick demurred. "It would be all right if we could remain young and have our friends around us, not to grow old and be left alone to, thank you! 'Whom the gods love die young,' you know."

"For all that I'd like to live to be a hundred years old," Irene declared. To her nineteen years it seemed impossible that age could ever become a reality.

They talked on till at length the two young men gave up the idea of trying to outstay each other, and went off together. Irene, a little tired, went to her room, and, thinking over her unanswered question and the evening's conversation, fell asleep.

When she wakened the sunlight filled her room. She was really stiff from having lain so long in one position. What was that whirring, rushing sound she heard outside? She dressed and opened the door into the hall, then stood amazed. Could she believe her eyes? In the night the place had been changed, the walls covered with enormous hangings, and, instead of the hardwood floor and rugs there were heavy carpets. A young girl was coming up the stairway, but at sight of her poised hastily, screamed and ran down again. Following her Irene went down to where a woman, older than the girl, approached her, and spoke:

"You are Irene Weston."

"Of course I am, who else should I be? Will you kindly tell me where I can find my mother and father?"

"They are away."

"That's strange. They did not speak of going."

The two women exchanged glances, and said something about a doctor.

A little later the medical man appeared, and sat down beside her, regarding her in a peculiar manner. "Do you feel quite well, Miss Weston?" he asked.

"Never better, except that everything seems so strange."

After a few more questions the doctor observed: "You slept unusually soundly, and longer than you realize."

"How long have I slept?"

"What year was it when you went to sleep?"

"What year? Why, 1911, of course."

"And this is 1992."

She gasped. "Surely you are joking."

For response the man took a newspaper from his pocket and showed it to her. It bore the date June 15, 1992. "I remarked that you had slept longer than you realized," he reminded her.

"But, doctor, I don't—I can't—why, I must be a hundred years old!"

"About that," he nodded.

"Tell me about it."

What she was told sounded like a fairy tale. She had slept for eighty-one years. Her room had been kept unchanged that there might not be the shock of strange surroundings when she wakened. Her case had been watched by scientists, and the world would know of her awaking within a few minutes.

"Are any of my family living?" she asked.

"The lady here is a granddaughter of your sister Edith. There is a niece who was living when you went to sleep."

"Who is she?"

"Mrs. Gates—her maiden name was Gladys Shaw."

"Little Gladys?—my sister Nell's baby?" she cried out. "Married, you say?"

"Married, widowed, and now an old lady."

"May I see her?"

"Certainly. If you feel like going. She lives just outside the city. My wing is at the door; shall we start?"

"Your wing."

"Yes, my aeroplane, you know."

A few moments later Irene found herself in midair looking down upon a large city.

"What place is this?" she asked.

"This? Oakford."

"Our little village?"

"Now a city of 200,000 inhabitants."

Wings of all sizes were about them. She knew now what the rushing sounds were she had heard. "I should think the wires would interfere in the street," she remarked.

"Do you see any wires?"

"No." Where are they—the trolley, telephone, and—"

"Telephone and telegraph are all wireless now, and our street conveyances have storage battery."

She looked down on strange sights till she reached her destination, and was presented to the niece whom she remembered as a baby just learning to talk, and who was now broke with years. Mrs. Gates was, however, overjoyed to see her aunt, and they had much to talk about. Irene learned others and how her family had died, a mournful satisfaction, and at length she asked:

"Do you remember anything about Phillip Morton and Richard Farnam?"

"Yes, indeed. I have wished many times that you could know when I have been over and looked at you sleeping the years away. Phillip married when you had been asleep about a year. Later his wife died and he married again."

"Twice," Irene commented, and he declared he would never marry any one if not me. But Dick—what of him?"

"Richard Farnam could not give you up. He believed, as did the doctors, that you would waken some time, and as long as there was the possibility there was no other girl for him, he said. He visited you every little while, till within a few years of your waking, until at last he died, an old man."

"Poor old Dick. I wanted to live to be a hundred years old, but I didn't want to live all those years. Of course I am glad to be awake now the rights are very interesting."

According to the doctor's directions was taken back to her old home and the marvelous day ended, while once more she fell asleep in her own bed.

When the morning morning, the sun was higher when she wakened and she missed the rushing sounds without. She went to her window and looked out. There were no wires in sight, and all the tall buildings of yesterday were gone. "I'm glad," she thought. "It's much better all."

Her sister Edith came to her door. "Are you dressed?" she exclaimed.

"No, not by a long shot. I want to tell you all about my wonderful dream. It seemed so real."

During the day when Phillip and Dick came to their sister Irene told them of it. Phillip came during the afternoon, but Dick not till evening, when at length he was rewarded by a "good night" he heard the girl breathe like contentment.

Of course it was only a dream—a very natural one, but—Dick?

He thought in the days that followed that she was thinking about. He gave up, that she was blushing, frowning and her head at times like one

Burglar's Umbrella.

Among a number of articles used by burglars when engaged in their nefarious calling is one peculiarly adapted to the purpose, and which is known as the burglar's umbrella.

In appearance it resembles a large umbrella that has seen hard service. It was formerly the property of a burglar, and it was by its means that he was able to enter the second story of a building. Removing the cover, a thick wound with ropes is revealed. The stick opens like a telescope or a jointed fishing rod. Wound round it is a rope ladder, made of strong material about 12 feet in length.

The ladder is only wide enough for one foot to be placed on the rungs. The extending stick was used to raise one end of the ladder to the window through which the operator wished to enter and on the upper end of the ladder two hooks are to be fastened to the sill.

This imitation umbrella is regarded as one of the most ingenious affairs ever made use of by a thief.

Very Vivid.

"In descriptive writing," said William Dean Howells, at a dinner at the Authors' Club in New York, "a vivid phrase is always better than a half dozen paragraphs.

"The vivid phrase is what every writer should seek. A phrase, I mean, something like that of the baby that shouted to its mother:

"'Oh, mamma, tum an' see the man a-buttering bricks.'"

INSURGENT AT BRIDGE

HE MAKES THE TRUMP SPADES WITH POWERFUL HAND.

Then Tells the Horrified Assemblage What He Really Thinks of the Game, and Departs to Play Poker.

"What! You make it spades on the original lead, and with a hand like that!"

Yes," he replied, "I made it spades because I didn't know what else to do. But as long as you have mentioned the matter, I may as well tell you that I don't know a thing about this game, and, what is more, I don't care. I was asked here tonight to fill in, and because it was assumed that if I didn't know I would probably lose my money. I am aware that by thus reporting in the middle of a game I am breaking it up and am guilty of rudeness. But I don't care a hang. I am afraid of it. I consider the game of bridge a rare waste of time and those people who spend their time in playing it are unworthy of any consideration at all, ever."

At this point he was suddenly interrupted by his wife, a very handsome young woman, who had been sitting at the next table and who threw her arms about him in a passion of sobs.

"Henri!" she exclaimed. "Stop! I love you. He doesn't mean it," she cried on to the others, who had all stopped playing. "He is not well. It is only a passing delusion. He is tired. He has been working too hard. Say that you do not mean it!" she cried, looking up at him anxiously.

In reply her husband looked sternly around him.

"I am resolved," he said, "that for once in my life I will tell the truth and be honest with myself. Bridge playing, in my opinion, is a senseless occupation. It is guessed by those people who are not intelligent enough to find legitimate things to occupy their minds, and who, possessed with a stupidity, greatly enjoy themselves in entertaining the fond hope that they may be able to win money from those whom they are pleased to call their friends. With these few remarks I will leave you to your card playing."

"Henri!" muttered the woman, still clinging to him, "this is terrible. I am afraid for you. Where are you going?"

And he smiled back heavily, while the others too intent to be further interrupted by one whom they already considered a madman resumed their seats.

"Have no fear, darling," he said. "I am going down to the club to play poker with the boys, where I have a chance for my money."—Life.

Wasn't Her Papa.

The death of Dr. McGaff calls to mind a story we have never before told. Former Vice President Fairbanks was in Chicago. He was a guest at one of the social functions. The hostess, a widow, was receiving with her daughter. Mr. Fairbanks was presented to the daughter. He said:

"I am glad to meet you, Miss McGaff. I knew your father well. He was a fine man."

"Pardon me," said the widow, "but you are mistaken. I am Mrs. McGaff. This is my daughter. My husband is still living."

Mr. Fairbanks was overcome with confusion. He stammered out an apology and then said:

"Well, I knew your husband, too, and he was a fine man."

Cost the Company Money.

Country With Only One Bank.

There are no public banking institutions in the Dominion of Canada, and but one private bank with agencies in the more important towns which buys and sells drafts, makes loans, and is the depositor of the government funds.

Banking and selling drafts is an important source of income for the bank and also for many private individuals.

Money is generally loaned at seven and eight per cent, although sometimes at 2 and 2½ per cent with first class personal or corporate security. Long time loans of large amounts are placed at 12 per cent per annum. Municipalities borrowing money for improvements and other purposes pay 1 per cent a month.

There are very few depositors in the local bank. Most of the well-to-do people, both among the mechanics and farmers, never think of depositing their money, but have small private safes or secrete their holdings in some other manner.—Moody's Magazine.

Educational.

"Do they teach domestic science at your college?" inquired the visitor, of the freshman.

"Only sewing," replied the freshman.

"Good idea, said the visitor. "And what do you sew, chiefly?"

"Wild oats," replied the freshman.—Harper's Weekly.

Inquisitive Youngster Wrings Confession From Parent After Considerable Questioning.

"Pass, who you goin' to vote for when it's all over?"

"Don't bother me, Johnny."

"Pass, who you goin' to vote for?"

"I say, don't you hear me?"

"Another pause.

"Pass, who you goin' to vote for?"

"I'm not going to vote for anybody. Are you not bothering now?"

"Why don't you go in to vote for anybody, pass?"

"I'll tell you in a bit if you don't quit bothering me."

"Still another pause.

"Pass, why don't you vote to-day?"

"Because I forgot to register. Now don't say another word. I'll spank you."

Another pause, but no word.

Where He Drew the Line.

Mr. McGregor, a Scotch Irishman, of Dublin, a Protestant, and Mr. Hall, a Roman Catholic, of Dublin, a Protestant, and Mr. Hall a Roman Catholic, were discussing religion.

Mr. McGregor: "I would like to get Hall to go to church with me."

Mr. Hall: "I would go with you, McGregor, if you would go with me to the Roman Catholic church."

Mr. McGregor: "I would go with you to the Roman Catholic church, but I would not go with you to the Protestant church."

Mr. Hall: "Why not?"

Mr. McGregor: "Because I would not like to be seen in such company."

Big Show.

Stage Hardup: "We know they Zeke circuses as 'spring.' Going to have out-door stage."

Circus Rider: "Shucks! Gosh, Zeke will feel sorry to see puffed up head hang out of tent."

No False Hopes.

Chappie: "I expect oysters are going to be more expensive."

Ford Parent: "Well, you needn't think you are going to get any more out of me."

A Remarkable Assumption.

"Really you are the only man I ever cared for."

"I suppose you engaged yourself to the others just to keep from hurting their feelings."

Entered as SECOND CLASS MATTER June 21, 1905, at RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, under the ACT of CONGRESS of March [illegible]

SATURDAY, May 20, 1911

The Standard Oil Company may simply change its name since the adverse U. S. decision of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Richmond has developed a mania for water front improvements, and in a year it is expected that there will be some activity on the water fronts of our city.

The Terminal respectfully acknowledges the receipt of the Pacific Gas & Electric Company 1911 Aspectus of properties owned and operated, territory served, finances, history and statistics for 1910, in a handsome illustrated volume.

GOOD LIGHT BROUGHT 40 PER CENT MORE TRADE.

This exhibit comes from a large meat market and grocery in Oklahoma City—that of the Yearout Market:

"After adopting the tungsten lamp for my store, displacing gasoline, and arranged according to the lighting company's plans, my business has increased 40 percent.

I attribute this entirely to the improved illumination, which made the store more attractive and brought out the quality of the goods handled by us. These goods were not shown to proper advantage under inferior illumination.

(Signed) N. R. Yearout"

SCHAPIRO GOES TO EUROPE

REAL ESTATE PRINCE OF RICHMOND LEAVES FOR GERMANY WITH HIS FAMILY

Portola Cafe, San Francisco, The Scene of Adios Entertainment Wishing Pleasant Journey and Safe Return.

The familiar figure of B. Schapiro, his smiling countenance and good cheer will be missed around the bay cities for the next five months as he with his family are speeding to Europe.

Last Saturday night at Portola Cafe, San Francisco was the scene of a brilliant banquet given by a host of Schapiro's friends mingled with regrets of his long absence with his estimable family, and rejoicing in the hope of his safe return.

Among those present were Major D. W. McLaughlin, Gen. R. R. Veale, Supt. L. D. Dimm, John E. Bouquet, F. A. Cascioni, William Vore, J. Brooks and others.

The Terminal wishes for B. Schapiro and family bon voyage.

Business is starting on the side streets at a few points. Watch the movement as it develops.

The stores of Richmond have splendid window displays.

BIG PROTEST.

There is quite a furor among the progressive property owners on Bissell ave. It has been discovered that they were about to be given a twelve foot sidewalk on each side of Bissell, which, with Church is destined to become a business street, with Otey advancing it to Ashland ave. There was once an attempt to make the sidewalks on Bissell and Nevada ave. 8 feet on each side of these streets leaving about room enough in the center of these streets for Buggies, Autos and Teams to pass. Bunnies, let us hear from you. The people say "No" and the vice-versa are lunches streets and the scheme was knocked into a cocked hat. East Richmond and Peckham Heights near Grand Canyon Park, is the best place for residences and for lots there will be but there limitless of lunge lots.

TRAINS LEAVE RICHMOND FROM THE MACDONALD AVENUE DEPOTS AS FOLLOWS:

Southern Pacific

The subway, at the main Richmond depot on Macdonald avenue, at a cost of $55,000, a permanent mechanism, built in 1909, fixes for all time the central commercial traffic way.

The next improvement will be a modern, enlarged mission style depot for the AVENUE and a local electrified road an extension north from Berkeley to the depot, looping the loop via West Berkeley to San Francisco, within 20 cent fare.

KEY ROUTE ON RICHMOND BOULEVARD

The Santa Fe motor cars between Richmond and Oakland are a complete success. Passengers are carried speedily between regular train service. Richmond is the main station and regular stops are made at Richmond Avenue, Sixth Street, and Wall Street near Pullman shops.

East Shore & Suburban Ry
—Electric cars. Local service.—

The electric cars give service equal to any modern American city. Cars to all parts of the city, transfers at the main junction at Macdonald Avenue and Sixth St.; also at Macdonald Ave. and Twenty-Third. Fare from Broadway and Seventh, Oakland to Richmond, 15c; to Pt. Richmond, 15c.

Richmond Belt Railway

The Belt Line connects Richmond with the commerce of the world through the oceanic and inland shipping with Richmond as a distributing center via great overland railroads, the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe, which by traffic arrangements, control the Belt and its wharves, each assuming separate management every alternate year. The largest vessels afloat discharge and take on cargo and meet the Terminal overland railroads here at deeper water than at San Francisco. The Belt Line also carries factory, warehouse, wharf and other employes, twice daily, via East Shore & Suburban electric cars to and from their homes in Richmond.

Trinity Mission Episcopal Church will be held at Grand Canyon Park, this city to-day.

The Santa Fe Bay Excursion

SANTA FE FERRY BOAT SAN PEDRO TRIED BY

Editors and affiliations in complimentary ride about the bay.

Last Sunday was the date of the editors' complimentary excursion on the first trip of the new ferry Steamer San Pedro which was put into service between San Francisco and Richmond to supply the demand for quick ferry service to the Exposition City.

There were other guests supplemental to the "pencil shovers" besides Santa Fe Railway officials, employes and family members who assisted in the courtesies of receiving, introduction and entertainment and all enjoying, to the number of about three hundred the famous Santa Fe hospitality.

The ride was over San Francisco and San Pablo Bays, leaving the slip at the San Francisco Ferry Building at 11:30 a. m., and returning about 5 p. m., riding continuously with only one stop at Richmond, seeing the location of big industries, Union Iron Works, naval stations, Presidio, Golden Gate, Standard Oil plant, the home of the big industry of the California Wire Association, where a concrete warehouse is being built at a cost of $20,000, Point Orient and Point San Pablo with the big shipping Brothers Islands, Sisters Islands, Shelter Cove on the North Richmond water front, Vallejo and Mare Island U. S. Navy Yard, the dry dock and the old battleship Independence. Here Assistant General Passenger Agent Gregory had the Royal Hawaiian band to play and the San Pedro party was greeted by the American jackies.

All day the air was balmy with just enough breeze to make the bay choppy. All day the guests sat in collective groups talking, enjoying bay scenery and listening to the sweet concert vocal and instrumental music of the Royal Hawaiian band.

With her strong musical throat the San Pedro shrieked responsively to all salutes in her honor and Captain Dunnigan here made his bow.

The party enjoyed luncheon and luncheon and refreshments and the unique features of ice cream received favorable comment, the pleasures of appetite continuing even in the face of the chief reversal of the customs of starvation caused by the briny smells from the Pacific Ocean.

The San Pedro goes into service between San Francisco and Richmond, alternating with the Steamer San Pablo, "the pride of San Francisco Bay." Both boats cost over $1,000,000. The name of Ferry Point and Point Richmond will become obsolete and the name of Richmond will be adopted and used in conformity with the name of the incorporated City of Richmond and the name of Richmond post office in the center of population on Macdonald ave., which, with all parts of the city will be greatly stimulated by the hourly ferry service, will be the scene of the busy whirr of many motor cars.

The officers of the San Pedro are Captain Lawrence A. Dunnigan, First officer D. Hamm, Second Officer A. Hansen, Chief Engineer Edward Mahoney; First Assistant Engineer Charles Scott, Second Assistant Engineer John Guinee and Third Assistant Engineer George Durham.

The excursion was under direction of C. J. Birchfield, general advertising agent, Los Angeles; J. B. Duffy, general passenger agent, H. K. Gregory, assistant general passenger agent; J. A. Kinucan, superintendent of terminals; W. B. Trull, general agent, Richmond; E. H. Harlow, master mechanic, Richmond. Friend Wm. Richardson, President of the California Press Association with Mrs. Richardson and son, Berkeley; Dr. and Mrs. Warren B. Brown and daughter, Miss Eleanor Lorraine, of the Richmond Terminal, Mrs. W. B. Trull and daughter, Miss Muriel; Mrs. E. H. Harlow; Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Wright were among the passengers from Richmond.

"Having taken your wonderful 'Cascarets' for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to 'Cascarets' for their wonderful curative action. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail, and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year."

Pleasant. Palatable. Potent. Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken, or Gripe. Put up in metal boxes only. Sold by druggists everywhere. Genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back. 49

MEGAPHONE ACTS AS CUPID

Old-Time Lovers Reunited When Widow Recognizes Voice of the Train Announcer.

For the first time in its history the megaphone has played the part of Cupid, and as a result a wedding uniting Frederick Mulhaus, train announcer in the Jersey City terminal of the Hudson tunnel and Mrs. Julia Swalinger, a German widow, will take place in a few days.

They knew each other when he was a youth in Germany and visited her at her father's cheese factory. Together they often sat beneath the arbor and [illegible] she recalls [illegible] be dreamed of [illegible] farm.
